

Penn State Abington

Immediate opening for Head Women's Volleyball Coach

Penn State Abington, a four year liberal arts campus located in Suburban Philadelphia, has an immediate opening for a part time head Women's Volleyball coach. Penn State Abington competes in the NEAC Conference and in our final year of provisional status in NCAA Division III. We expect to complete the transition to NCAA Division III in August 2012.

Responsibilities include: developing a competitive team through organized practices; player evaluation and development; recruiting of student athletes who are admissible under the guidelines of Penn State Abington and can add to the competitiveness of the team; supervise assistant coaches and direct their responsibilities; interact effectively with campus and department personnel, officials, conference and non conference opponents, parents, alumni and the local community; scouting and video analysis; and ability to successfully manage team dynamics.

Minimum qualifications include:

- A bachelor's degree or equivalent experience;
- Previous head and/or assistant coaching experience at the high school and/or college level;

Preferred qualifications include:

- 3-5 years of demonstrated success in the development of a varsity Volleyball program at the high school or collegiate level as a head coach;
- Extensive knowledge and understanding of the recruiting process and a proven track record in recruiting and retaining student athletes within your program.

Applications will be reviewed upon receipt. Applications will only be accepted until January 7, 2012. Candidates should email their cover letter (addressing how your qualifications specifically meet this position), coaching resume and three names, phone numbers and email addresses of references to:
